

Case study

Diversity's the name of the game

We are committed to equality and diversity and make sure that everyone who works with us feels the same.

We recently hosted a special event at Aintree Racecourse with one clear aim - a career in construction should be championed, it should be accessible and it should be fairly represented regardless of age, gender, religion, race, disability or sexual orientation.

Over 100 people attended the event to re-affirm their commitment to diversity in the industry and the need for fairer representation.

Nichola O'Brien, Business Development Manager of Helena PropertyCare said: "I found the event inspiring and informative. It was fantastic to see so many organisations in one room that genuinely want to address equality and diversity issues in order to provide better service for customers."

Delroy Beverley, Director of property solutions, Incommunities Group, also praised the event saying: "This event was a massive success in relation to the issues around diversity and inclusion in the construction sector particularly amongst women."

Key fact: we have developed a single equality scheme which sets out our equality and diversity policy.